

ADVANCED MANUFACTURING

The Dayton, Ohio region's manufacturing industry is one of the largest, most highly developed centers in the United States.

According to research from the Dayton Region Manufacturers Association, the industry employs 114,411 workers or 15.26% of the area's workforce. That workforce is supported by the region's 40 colleges and universities that provide education and job training. Between 2009 and 2013, the manufacturing industry invested $2.3 billion in the area by expanding or constructing 200 facilities and creating more than 12,000 jobs. The industry's growth – especially in aerospace and electronics – is supported by a unique combination of factors: abundant water resources, efficient transportation networks, and a historic knack for innovation. Manufacturing has been and will continue to be critical for the economic and national security of the United States, which makes the Dayton region a vital investment in the country's future.
